Introduction

The continuation of the armed conflict for more than seven years in Yemen has exacerbated humanitarian needs in all vital sectors. A decline in basic food, health, and educational services has also affected most of the population, especially in rural and remote areas, as well as the suffering of the most vulnerable groups, including the displaced and those affected by the current situation due to the escalation of poverty and hunger and continued decline of the country's economy and living standards.

With the objective of meeting the broad humanitarian needs of the year 2022, the For Human Foundation for Development (FHD) supported and implemented a wide range of programs, projects, services, and humanitarian initiatives, including (food security, shelter and protection, economic empowerment, health and education, water and environmental sanitation).

Thousands of families and individuals have had their needs met through all of these interventions, which have helped them overcome their various crises, which continue to haunt many of them and continue to cause them pain and suffering.

The purpose of this report is to provide a detailed explanation of what has been done in this regard based on drawn plans that have been implemented professionally and according to a transparent and clear working method, in collaboration with a number of regional and international donors, to whom we all are deeply grateful.

As we move forward, we also hope to strengthen and develop our partnership with them to achieve integration into humanitarian work.

For Human Development Foundation extends its thanks and gratitude to all its workers and volunteers who dedicate themselves to making other groups in need happy.

We affirm our determination to continue serving vulnerable groups and to expand the scope of our humanitarian interventions and services to include the largest possible number of those in need of support in various regions of the Republic.

Executive Director
Ziyad Al-Samei

About the Foundation

FHD is an independent, non-governmental, non-profit, community-based humanitarian development organization that is credible, transparent, committed and sustainable at the national level. FHD was established in December 2014, and relies on dedicated staff and volunteers to achieve its goals and policies. Experts and qualified advisors from various fields support the foundation's intellectual and creative development.

SECURITY

About the project

Food security situation in Yemen is one of the worst globally, according to reports issued by United Nations organizations. Since humanitarian aid is unstable and the economic crisis is worsening daily, the statistics are expected to increase.

As part of its efforts to limit the exacerbation of the food crisis, FHD has been implementing several project-related to food security throughout the year in cooperation with international, regional and local organizations.

ECONOMIC EMPOWERMENT

About the project

In order to achieve comprehensive and sustainable growth, FHD places a great deal of emphasis on economic empowerment projects. These projects are among the most effective means to achieve development in society. Consequently, they are considered a lifeline to help women advance economically, since the results indicate that women's financial illiteracy and negative social customs and traditions are major challenges facing women's economic empowerment.

Out of FHD keenness on this aspect, it has worked hard to empower women economically during the year 2022 in many regions.

PROTECTION

About the project

Among FHD's most important activities are protection and shelter projects, which fight poverty, care for the poor, and improve the lives of women, girls, children, their families, and their affected communities.

Due to the state of emergency that the region is experiencing, FHD provides a package of preventive and curative interventions to protect the most vulnerable groups, particularly those displaced and their host families, from abuse, neglect, exploitation and violence.

EDUCATION AND HEALTH

About the project

Education and health are among the biggest current crises in Yemen, as the conflict in Yemen has exacerbated educational and health challenges. Conflict has resulted in poor management of the educational and health care sectors, in a country that suffers greatly in these areas.

FHD has therefore sought to contribute effectively and with great interest to these areas, by developing areas that are lacking in education and health projects.

WATER AND ENVIRONMENTAL SANITATION

About the project

Yemen suffers from the largest humanitarian crisis in the world, as Yemenis face multiple crises, including armed conflict, displacement, the threat of famine, and the spread of diseases that have caused the worst man-made humanitarian crisis. About 75% of the population (22.22 million) need humanitarian assistance, including 3.11 million people who are in urgent need of emergency assistance to survive, an increase of one million people since June 2017.

Due to its significance, For Human Development Foundation (FHD) has dedicated its efforts to saving people's lives by providing them with the minimum amount of potable water and mitigating the spread of infectious diseases, such as cholera, schistosomiasis and other diseases related to water quality or quantity, which leads to an increase in the number of acute malnutrition cases resulting from drinking contaminated water.

FHD also facilitated the access of the displaced and poor families to the minimum amount of potable water at the distribution points in the targeted camps and villages.

The project contributed to improving the conditions of the displaced and host communities, and reducing their risk of contracting diseases related to water, sanitation and malnutrition, in the areas of (Al Sabaa Al Ulya, Al Sabaa Al Sufia, and Al Akash) in Hays district of Hodeidah Governorate.

In order to achieve these outcomes, the target communities were provided with improved water and sanitation facilities and hygiene kits, along with awareness and knowledge that could help improve water and sanitation practices.

STORIES

Um Ahmed's success story

For a long time, Um Ahmed dreamed of having an income-generating project. Based on this ardent desire, she went to several workshops close to her home to work for them in the hope that she would be trained and developed, but nothing of that was achieved.

After discovering she was interested in sewing, one of her friends suggested she take a sewing course with For Human Development Foundation (FHD), telling her that FHD would train her until she becomes a professional.

Um Ahmed did not hesitate, so she joined the program directly and was accepted. She learned many skills that she was not aware of in the past. She did not know what life skills are, what marketing is, and how the budget is managed.

She was previously afraid of cutting expensive fabrics as she could not afford it, and she had no knowledge of measurements. However, following her joining FHD, she completed several training courses and specialized in embroidery for wedding dresses.

Her self-confidence increased as a result, and she developed her own project at home, which improved the financial situation of her family and herself.

Sawsan's success story

Since her childhood, Sawsan was distinguished by her love for sewing, and she says, "I have always been impressed when I see models on mobile phones or TV. I wish I could make similar pieces, and I dream of having my own factory to produce clothes."

Sawsan returned to Hadhramaut after having been out of the country for over twenty years. She was unable to complete her secondary education due to her father's financial situation.

Sawsan says, «I used to go to my neighbor who is a seamstress and watch her as she sews and cuts, and she refuses to help her or teach me, but I always go to her to watch her only.»

And when Sawsan and her family had to return to Yemen, they found the conditions bad. Their situation continued to get worse until she looked for courses to develop herself and learn what she dreamed of and wished of being able to do.

Sawsan says, «For Human Development Foundation (FHD) gave me the first step in realizing my dream.» When the opportunity arose for Sawsan, she joined the sewing training course conducted by FHD for a period of 3 months. During the training, she also loved helping others and explaining to her fellow trainees. She was greatly distinguished as she worked on producing creative works in the sewing course.

A year after Sawsan graduated, she was requested to train at the FHD after seeing her outputs, creativity, style, and ability to deliver information. Her method of conveying information in the desired manner was greatly appreciated by the trainees when she began the training.

Sawsan says that her family did not believe that their daughter was sewing, training, and financially participating greatly in meeting their needs, as they became dependent on her and very proud of her. And since she had long dreamed of establishing her own factory to produce dresses and clothes, this project is considered one of the basic seeds for its formation.

Success story of M.D.K

Displaced from Al-Jarrahi district, M.D.K lives in the district of Hays, Hodeidah governorate. She had three children, one of whom died due to illness, and she had two children left to support. Her father and husband used to sell firewood to support her and her family, but because of the war, her father died, and her husband was mentally ill and lost his mind, in addition to the burning of their entire house.

M.D.K. says, “I had to work in the same profession (collecting firewood) to provide a living for myself and my children. However, I am still in this situation because my life is hard and I still live in a yard that has no roof and no livable shelter”.

“This life has caused my children to contract many diseases. Sometimes, neither I nor my children can find food to satisfy our hunger, and I have no parents, brothers or sisters who provide support, aid and assistance to me”.

She also says, “until a team from FHD came to know me and assess my case, so they offered me to receive training with them in sewing and embroidery courses. They explained to me that this course would help me support myself and my family”.

“I agreed to register, and when I finished all the stages of the training, I was given a grant from the International Islamic Charity Organization, which is a sewing machine with all its accessories.

Now, thanks to God, I started working on the sewing profession, and I have an income that supports me and my family. I also aspire to expand my business further in the near future”.

Success Story of S.M.K

She lives in Al-Khawkhah district, Hodeidah governorate, displaced from the city of Sa'ada, which was a conflict zone. She lives with her family of 9 members, her mother, children, brother and sister.

S.M.K. says: I was living in a good condition before the displacement, as I had a shelter and food to satisfy my hunger and the members of my family. However, after the war, we had to flee our city and leave everything we owned behind.

S.M.K. also says: I settled in Al-Khawkhah city, but my condition was getting worse from day to day, and the neighbors knew my difficult condition. One day, my neighbor advised me to register for the training courses offered by the safe space in the district, so I went to register for one of the courses. Shortly after, a team from the safe space came to my house to identify my needs for this course and also to assess my living conditions in general.

I was selected to enter this course. At first, I did not know anything about raising livestock, how to treat them, and take care of their health and birth. However, after completing the course, I acquired many skills that were lacking on how to take care of livestock in all aspects. In addition, we were given a course on life skills that encouraged us on how to market our projects and how to develop them.

After completing the course, I was given a grant from the International Islamic Charity Organization, which helped me provide for myself and my family. Now my ambition is to take more care of livestock and to work on opening my own project in this field because it has gradually changed my life for the better.

Acknowledgment

In conclusion, we extend an acknowledgment letter to the FHD's team for their efforts and dedication to work in a team spirit, which is reflected in the best performance of the Foundation and the success of its projects.

We do not neglect to extend our sincere thanks to all the partners with whom we worked throughout the year to achieve the goals of humanitarian work in order to alleviate the suffering of those affected. We look forward during the coming years to reaching the most affected communities.

By establishing new partnerships with donors and partners, we can work together to help develop and support war-affected communities in various regions.
